

Abstract

Plants are important for the animals in the earth, not only humans but also fishes and mammals. They offered us oxygens and takes in carbon dioxide, clean the water and the air, and the body of ancient died plants becomes the oil and coal that supporting human beings for hundreds of years till now.

Two specific animals are listed in here due to its hidden ‘magic’. The first one is called GOJI, also known as the wolfberry. The special part of GOJI is that it can change the taste system once you eat it. To be more specific, after eating, you will taste sweet if you have eaten lemon. Another plant that is introduced here is called, Colocasia Esculenta, or just its roots – TARO. TARO is eatable once cooked thoroughly, and said to be health. However, it has a defense system that if you cut or peer it without wearing protection, the skin that in contact with the cutting section and the juice will be itchy due to the chemicals contained in juice.

Every existence must have a reason. Darwin predict the revolution of the livings in Earth. If it is useful, can help you produce more generation, live more easily, or in another word “survive”, then it can stay; if not, it will die. That’s how we have fish can survive deep in the sea without sunlight, the plants that can eat insects, the animals that can fake death and us, the humans that can do things that is beyond the imagination of any animals.

Since humans are living in the exactly same world with all those creatures. It is never too much to ask ourselves to withhold some curiosity towards them. Everything that exist here have a reason. That works for everything in this world, same as us. Be open-minded and let the world to surprise you.
